

ABSTRACT

A reconfigurable chip includes a despreaders/correlator function block in order to better implement communication protocols which require despreaders and/or correlation. These despreaders/correlation functional blocks are used in addition to reconfigurable functional blocks having arithmetic logic units. The functions of the despreaders/correlator functional blocks are preferably controlled by instructions from a local instruction memory.

032001-079